THE HILLS.

The hills!—the everlasting hills!
How peerlessly they rise,
Like Earth's gigantic sentinels
Discovering in the skies,
Hail! Nature's storm proof fortresses,
By Freedom's children trod;
Hail! ye invulnerable walls—
The masonry of God!

When the dismantled Pyramids
Shall blend with desert dust,
When every temple made with hands
Is faithless to its trust,
Ye shall not stoop your Titan crests—
Magnificent as now!
Till your almighty Architect
In thunder bids you bow!

I love the torrents strong and fierce,
That to the plain ye fling,
Which gentle flows drink at their goal,
And eagles at their spring;
And, when arrested in their speed
By winter's wand of frost,
The brilliant and fantastic forms
In which their waves are tossed.

Glorious ye are, when Noon's fierce beams
Your naked summits smite,
As o'er ye Day's great lamp hangs poised
In cloudless crystal light;
Glorious, where o'er ye sunset clouds
Like brooding eagles lie,
Sublime, when thro' dim moonlight looms
Your spectral majesty.

I love your iron sinewed race—
Have shared their rugged fare—
The thresholds of whose rocky homes
Look out on boundless air;
Bold hunters, who from highest cliffs
The wild goat's trophies bring,
And crest their bonnets with the plumes
Of your aerial king!

I love the mountain maidens—
Their step's elastic spring
Is light, as if some wingless bird
Unbowed them with its wing;
There is the wild, unfettered grace
That art hath never spoiled,
And there the beautiful purity
That fashion hath not soiled.

Mountains! I dwell not with ye now,
To climb ye, and rejoice—
And round me boom, as I write,
A crowded city's voice;
But oft in watches of the night,
When sleep the turmoil stills,
My spirit seems to walk abroad
Among ye, mighty hills!

"I WISH I MAY BE SHOT."

The little phrase placed at the top of this paragraph, is one that our contemporaries impute to poor Crockett, who fell in death among the Mexicans; and as we remember, our brother of the Gazette made it a nucleus around which he wound a pretty wreath of flowers of his own twining; but this was not the euphonic phrase of the gallant Colonel, who was wont, we are sorry, to interlard his phrases with a species of words which Dr. Websterhouse of Boston says in every thing which he writes, ornament language about as much as a large patch does on a pretty face. It was the delicacy of editors, then proverbially delicate, that substituted shot for a word which he will not introduce to "eyes polite." It happened to us once to hear the Colonel use his expressive affirmation.

Some junketing or other was held at Camden, N. J. while Col. Crockett was on a visit to this city—whether it was the trial of his new rifle or not, we have forgotten; but the Colonel was in the midst, and in the course of the afternoon, a pocket book was lost by a member of the company, and before night, the Colonel was also minus his pocket book and nearly two hundred dollars. In the evening he visited us, with a view of advertising for his lost property, and while we were preparing the notice, the Colonel stated the particulars of the case. "After we had attended to the matters about the field," said he, "I sat down at the table to a glorious repast, with an appetite like a saw mill. In about half an hour there was an outcry made that one of the company had lost his pocket book with money in it. I clapped my hand at once upon my pocket, and found to my surprise that mine was gone which only a few minutes before I had felt in its place. I said nothing about my loss to any one until I came away, and then I mentioned the matter to Mr. —, my friend here, from whom I received the money in exchange."

"And why," said that friend, "did you not speak out at once, perhaps the person could have been detected?"

"I knew that," said Colonel Crockett, "and I thought of it; but there I was, eating and drinking with gentlemen who were making more of me than I deserved and do you think I could bow out in the midst of their hospitality, that I had lost my pocket book, with a beggarly sum of bank notes, and those on the District banks! I could not do it; if I could, I wish I may be —."

We looked up to see what the accusing spirit would have to carry up to Heaven's chancery—good nature sat on the round face of the son of the forest, with whom unsophisticated politeness had gained a victory at the expense of the pocket; and we may hope that, as the example of the error was not likely to be followed, the fault itself was repeated and forgiven.

PROSPECTUS

For the continuation of the
CARROLL FREE-PRESS.

THE interest of William Johnston, Esq. in this establishment, having been transferred to John Christy, the Free Press will in future be conducted by PEARCE & CHRISTY. The political complexion of this paper will not be changed—the editors being firm in their determination to preserve its neutral character. The transfer from Mr. Johnston to Christy, has been made with the hope of ensuring the continuation of a newspaper in Carrollton: And with this view, the editors appeal to the people of the county for a patronage equal to the merits and importance of their enterprise. One of the editors being a practical printer, and having determined to devote his time exclusively to the interest of the paper, it is confidently hoped that, with a reasonable increase of their subscription list, the Carroll Free Press may be continued to the mutual advantage of both subscribers and publishers.

Of the convenience and necessity of a public Journal, published at the county seat, every citizen of the county must be convinced; and the editors trust that the people of Carroll will sustain them in their efforts to promote public good, and to secure an honest maintenance.

TERMS.—The Free Press will be published every Friday morning, at Two Dollars per annum, payable half yearly in advance. If payment be delayed until after the end of the year, $2.50 will be required. But as payment in advance is for the interest of all parties, this mode is respectfully recommended.

Advertisements inserted at the usual rate. All communications addressed to the Editors must be post paid.
